

Mainstreaming the Paris Principles in the daily work of NHRIs

Importance for your work in relation to Artificial Intelligence and Human Rights.

Gabriel Almeida, Senior Human Rights Officer at ENNHRI

After this session, you will:

- Have a better understanding of the UN Paris Principles are, why they are relevant and how you can use it in your work;
- Consider how the Paris Principles (and other documents of reference) can strengthen your national, regional and international work in relation to Artificial Intelligence and Human Rights.
- Identify the Paris Principles as a source of common ground with other institutions, fostering cooperation.

I invite you to see the UN Paris Principles as:

a compass

Let's be stronger, independent and effective!

our common DNA

Let's communicate and work together!

a ladder

Let's build on what we have for further recognition and stronger standing!

Sources:

- UN Paris Principles, as adopted by the UN General Assembly;
- General Observations by the Sub-Committee on Accreditation (SCA);
- NHRI Recognition at UN level (e.g. GA resolutions), regional level (CoE + EU);
- CoE Committee of Minister Recommendation

But never below the UN Paris Principles!

Joint exercise: connecting the UN Paris Principles with your work in relation to AI and human rights!

- Competence to promote and protect human rights;
- Independence;
- Broad human rights mandate;
- Pluralism;
- Adequate resources;
- Engaging with international bodies;
- Cooperation with civil society organization and other national bodies;

What does this mean? How is it applicable or important to my work in relation to AI?

Conclusion:

The Paris Principles are there to guide your work,
make you stronger and help you connect!

They provide a solid basis for your work in relation to human rights and AI.

Have a fantastic NHRI Academy!
